As you will see, this particular challenge stays narrow and focused on the meat of the issue regarding the putative president's ineligibility.

I almost had to laugh, if it weren't so serious, one of the Defendant's points in his opposition: That voters soundly rejected citizenship wasn't an issue since 69+ million allegedly voted for the usurper!

That's the best Barry's $600 an hour lawyers can come up with as an argument?

I guess we'll see if the Georgia Office of Administrative Hearings have the guts to rule for the Plaintiff or try, once again as so many others, to shove this issue under the rug. They are fully aware of what a decision against Obama/Soetoro would mean: it opens the big giant door to a constitutional crisis in real time.

This is the document filed:
